for the benefit of such we will relate it:

A hard customer, whom we will call for the nonce Billy Watson, was fond of going to the tavern before mentioned and inall other persons, requiring blanks, or any other dulging in a 'cup of sack,' or other refreshment of the kind, and one night in particular, while imbibing the beverage, in rates for cash. Callet the JOURNAL OFFICE | walked his lady, and in no mild tone of voice requested his company home, at the same time remarking she was an abused and misused wife. Old Birly denied the fact of her being his spouse with much apparent wrath and considerable emphasis. The lady still persisting, he threatened to call a watchman, and eventually did so. The cream of the joke was . Charley' avered that he had seen the lady before, and requested her to keep still and beoff or he would remove her to quarters which she had seen before. She cominned scolding, and the watchman took her off, maugre her cries, which were loud enough to attract all the people in the square, but failed to disturb the equanimity of her busband, who let her sleep, if sleep she did, in the watch house, and next morning had her released.
